Babylon Village Resident One of LI's Top Business Women

(Hauppauge, NY . . . June 7, 2011) Babylon Village resident Janine Logan was named one of Long Island Business News' 50 Most Influential Business Women for 2011. The honor was bestowed upon her at an award ceremony held May 19, 2011 at the Crest Hollow Country Club. Janine Logan is director of communications for the Nassau-Suffolk Hospital Council (NSHC) and the Northern Metropolitan Hospital Association (NorMet). These two associations represent 53 hospitals located throughout Long Island and the Hudson Valley.

Janine joins a distinguished group of her peers from business, government, health care, education, and the not-for-profit fields who have been honored by Long Island Business News for the past 12 years. The Top 50 Women Award recognizes Long Island's leading professional women for their business acumen, mentoring activities, and community involvement.

"Janine is a skilled communications professional who is deeply committed to improving public health and is an active, involved member of her community," said Kevin Dahill, NSHC president and CEO. "The Hospital Council and its members are very proud that Long Island Business News has recognized her outstanding leadership."

In her current role as communications director for NSHC and NorMet, her responsibilities span media, government, and community relations for these two associations and the hospitals they represent. She regularly mentors public relations student interns from area colleges and maintains memberships on community task forces and advisory boards of several Long Island business organizations and government entities.

She holds a Bachelor of Science degree in Communications Arts from St. John's University and national accreditation in the practice of public relations from the Public Relations Society of America. She lives in Babylon with her husband and four children.
